

FUN AND INTERESTING READING MATTER FOR THE HOME CIRCLE

By O. B. Joyful.

One of the first things brought before the meeting of the general passenger agents of the New York Central lines after their arrival in St. Louis was the question of transportation of the various officers of the Old Jokes' Home and their charges.

It was explained by the genial Warren J. Lynch, G. P. A. of the Big Four, that news had been passed along the line that Officer Jerry Sullivan, who was detailed on special service in the extradition from London of a superannuated joke, would soon be back, and that, in the interest of humor, it was of the utmost importance that his trip from New York to St. Louis be expedited in every possible way. He added that, at the urgent request of Chauncy Depew, dean of American and all other state humor, he had instructed the boys to pass Officer Sullivan and all his company. The alert and efficient officer has gathered in quite a number of gags originally sprung by Artemus Ward, Or-phous C. Kerr, Josh Billings, James Russell Lowell and other old-time American jokesters. These unfortunates were found being handled about without mercy in the London and provincial press and playhouses, and were still looked upon as mysterious and attractive youngsters, no one over there having as yet seen their point. After these arrangements, the jovial passenger agents were taken out in the blue ambulance for a visit to the Old Jokes' Home, where they recognized a large number of their old-time friends. A sumptuous luncheon of Cork-O was partaken of, and after speeches had been made at which a few of the most admired old jokes were introduced to the assemblage, the railroad men united in a resolution, which was ordered to be handsomely engraved and framed, expressing their appreciation of the good work being done by the Old Jokes' Home and its efficient staff. Prof. Hesa Corker has taken the precaution to send a bountiful supply of Cork-O to the stewards of dining cars all along the line, for the sustenance of the ancient fellows being brought to the Home by Officer Sullivan. Also to the stewards on the E. & O. for the numerous old gags and funnyisms which O. B. Joyful has captured at Baltimore from the funny men who gathered there in convention. Pending the return of these two officials, the ambulance continues to go on its daily rounds. Here are some of its latest patients:

"How would you prevent a dog from going mad on Saturday?"
"I dunno."
"Kill it on Friday."

Husband: I wish I knew where I could find a buried treasure.
Wife: Never mind, dear; I'm your treasure.

Husband: Yes, but you are not buried.

Poss: Why did you stand so far away from that man when you were shaving him?

The New Barber: Why, sir, he said he didn't want to be shaved close.

Sharpe: Everyone seems to be working tramp jokes these days.

Wheaton: H'm! Wonder someone don't work the tramps.

Pete: De lumber yard gang had dat yel-lah pup well trained.

Jimmy: You bet. Why, every time dey'd tie a can to his tail he'd go down to Kelly's an' bring it back full of beer.

STORIES FROM FAMOUS BOOKS

THE VIVANDIERE.

(Copyright Placed in Public Domain by Minette, the Vivandiere after the battle of Uim. The following is the story as told by Charles Lever in his history of Tom Burke.)

I WAS but a young campaigner and might from sheer ignorance have passed my night in the open air, when by good fortune I caught sight of my old companion, Ploche, hurrying along a narrow street, carrying a basket well stored with bottles on his arm.

"Ah, mon, lieutenant, you here, and not supposed yet, I'd wager a crown?"

"You'd win it, too, Ploche, nor do I see any great chance of my doing so."

"Come along with me, sir, Minette has just opened her canteen in the flower market."

Passing through an arched gateway we entered a little courtyard, where several horses were picketed, the ground about them being strewn with straw knee deep.

We entered a large room full 60 feet in length, at one end of which, under a species of canopy formed by two old regimental colors, sat Minette—for so I guessed to be a very pretty brunette, with a most decidedly Parisian look about her air and toilet; a table covered with a snow-white napkin was in front of her, on which lay a large bouquet and open book, in which she appeared to be writing as we came in.

With a few words of gracious civility, well and neatly expressed, mademoiselle welcomed me to the canteen, which, she said, was open to the public since the presence of Gen. Wellington himself.

"Yes, by St. Denis," cried Ploche, with energy. "Ploche Durat and Marshal Davoust, too, have been here." Dropping his voice to a whisper, he added something that called a faint blush to mademoiselle's cheek.

"Ah!" cried she, passionately. "If I had been a man I should like to be such a one as Murat. How his black eyes sparkle and his proud lips curl when the roll of artillery or the clattering of a platoon is heard—how his whole soul is in the fight! I remember once—it was at the last of his brigade was stationed beneath the hill and had no orders to move forward for several hours—he used to get off his horse and walk about and endeavor by pushing the smoke away thus with his hand and almost kneeling to the ground to catch a view of the battle, and then he would spring into the saddle, and for sheer passion, dash the spurs into his horse's flanks till he reared and plunged again. I watched him thus for hours, I loved to look at him, chafing and fretting, like his own mettled charger, he was so handsome!"

"A drink, Minette! Something to cool my lips, for heaven's sake," said he at last, as he saw me standing near him. I filled the little cup you see here with wine and handed it to him. Scarcely had he raised it to his lips when an aide-de-camp galloped up and whispered some words in haste.

"Ha, ha!" cried he, with a shout of joy, "they want us, then—the squadrons will advance by sections—and charge!" and with that he flung the goblet from him to the ground, and when I took it up I found that with the grasp of his strong fingers he had crushed it nearly together. See here, I never would let it be changed. It is just as at the time he clapped it, and I kept it as a souvenir of the prince. She took from a little shelf the cup, as she spoke, and held it up before me, with the devoted admiration with which some worshiper would regard a holy relic. "And that," said Minette, as she pressed to her lips a faded cockade, whose tinge-worn tints still showed the tri-colored emblem of the republic—"that I value above the cross of the Legion itself."

"Whose was it, Minette? Some brave soldier's, I'm sure."

"And you may be sure. That was the cockade of Le Premier Grenadier de la Franco-La Tour d'Auvergne—the cousin of your own general."

"He fell at Neuberg," said mademoiselle, "scarcely a day's march from here. They buried him on the field and placed him dead, as he had been ever while living, with his face toward the enemy. And you never heard of him—juste Ciel! it is almost incredible. You never branded with the Forty-fifth of the line—that's certain."

"And why so?"

"Because they call his name at every parade muster, as though he were still alive and well. The first man called is Le Tour d'Auvergne, and the first soldier answers, 'Mort sur le champ de bataille.' That's a prouder monument than your statue and tombstone. Is it not?"

"Indeed it is," said I, to whom the story was then new, though I afterward lived to hear it corroborated in every respect.

One evening, while describing the passage of the Adige, she proceeded to relate the plan of a flank movement, effected by some light infantry regiments, thrown across the river a considerable distance up the stream. "We came along," said she, "under the shade of some willows, and at last reached the ford—the leading companies halted, two officers sounded the river, and found that it was passable. I was close by at the time—it was the Col. La-

he asked me for a 'goutte.' 'It may be the last you'll ever give me, Minette,' said he. 'I don't expect to see you again.' 'Are you going to remain at this side, Colonel?' said I. 'No, parbleu!' said he, 'not when the Twenty-second crosses to the other.' 'Neither am I, then,' said I; 'my place is with the head of the battalion.' 'Well, well, they all pressed me to stay back—they said a thousand kind things too—but that only decided me the more to go on—and as the signal-rocket was fired the word was given and on we went. For the first eight or ten paces it was mere wading—but suddenly a grenadier in the front called out, 'Gare! Lift your muskets; it's deep here,' and so it was—with one plunge down I went, but they seized me by the arms and carried me along, and some way or other we reached the bank. Morbleu! I felt half-drowned, but there was little time to think over these things, for scarcely had the column formed, when the cry of 'Cavalry!' was given, and down came the lancers with a swoop; but we were all ready. The flank companies fell back and formed in square and a tremendous volley sent them off faster than they came. 'Now, then, push forward double quick,' said the old colonel—the 'pas de charge.'

"Alas! the poor little drummer was lying dead at his feet. The thought suddenly seized me. I sprang forward, unstrung his drum, threw the strap over my shoulder and beat the 'pas de charge,' a cheer ran along the whole battalion and on we went. Mort de ciel! I was never so near the fire before. There was the enemy, scarce two hundred yards off—two great plummets, with artillery between, waiting for us. 'Keep her back; keep back, Minette; brave file!' I heard no more—a shot came whizzing past and struck me here. She pulled down her dress as she spoke and disclosed the scar of a bullet's track on her white shoulder; then, as if suddenly recollecting, she blushed deeply, drew her kerchief closely around her and muttered in a low voice, 'Ma bi, how these things make one forget to be a woman.' And with that she hung down her head, and despite all I could say would not utter another word."

THE MOTORMAN.

The lever works at my command; I'm lord and master of the brakes. Me and the car has lots of sand—We're not the kind that makes mistakes. This blooming box is not so warm, But I'm its boss for lasting keep. Just watch me work this here reverse—See how it stops and backward creeps. I love the car and it loves me—Just like the wife and kid, you see.

The other day we shot along—Gee whizz! we certainly did shoot! The juice was at its same old song. And all the trucks was following suit. When in the middle of the track I seed a kid engaged in play My heart sure gave my teeth a crack. But did I stop the car? Well, say! I stopped in time—myself did. And thought about my little kid.

Of course, I ain't no millionaire. But I'm not hankering for wealth. I'd rather be quite free from care (And have the jolliest kind of health. I'd rather have my present joys Than all of Rockefeller's stuff. The best of wives—the best of boys!—Say! That is happiness enough. See, there she is! She'll never miss When at my heart she throws a kiss!—Griff Alexander, in Pittsburgh Dispatch.

HER BURDEN TOO HEAVY.

The death by suicide of Miss Dollie Delaney in Saline County, Kan., the other day brings out a story very suggestive of the struggle of Helen Keller, the blind and deaf dumb girl of whom so much is said in the papers. Miss Delaney was born nearly 19 years ago without arms or legs. In the place of her right arm there was a handless stub a few inches long. With this stub she was able to reach her chin and by holding a pen between the stub and the chin she was able to write. She could crochet and do other fancy work, and she had cultivated an artistic bent until she could draw or paint a very passable picture. Moreover, she had developed a way of locomotion by which she could get about very readily, using a crutch under the stump of her only arm. Perhaps nothing would better show the facility with which the poor girl performed seemingly impossible things than the manner in which she accomplished her own death. She managed to load and cock a rifle and discharge its bullet through her heart, using the crutch to spring the trigger.

Up to very recently the girl had seemed to be happy and contented. It is gathered from some of her letters, however, that of late she has been brooding over her unfortunate condition.

Baby Mine

Every mother feels a great dread of the pain and danger attendant upon the most critical period of her life. Becoming a mother should be a source of joy to all, but the suffering and danger incident to the ordeal makes its anticipation one of misery. Mother's Friend is the only remedy which relieves women of the great pain and danger of maternity; this hour which is dreaded as woman's severest trial is not only made painless, but all the danger is avoided by its use. Those who use this remedy are no longer despondent or gloomy; nervousness, nausea and other distressing conditions are overcome, the system is made ready for the coming event, and the serious accidents so common to the critical hour are obviated by the use of Mother's Friend. "It is worth its weight in gold," says many who have used it. $1.00 per bottle at drug stores. Book containing valuable information of interest to all women, will be sent to any address free upon application to BRADFIELD REGULATOR CO., Atlanta, Ga.
